The Collect.

O God, pour out upon us your wondrous gifts of wisdom and understanding, that we, through this may learn to become more in tune with you, O great God now and ever. Amen.

The Epistle for the 3rd Sunday before Lent is from the Wisdom of Solomon.

Wisdom which is the worker of all things taught me; for in her is pure understanding, unaffected by all things, ready to do all good things. Wisdom is the breath of the power of God, and nothing can defile it because of its purity. It is everlasting, and in unity with all that lives and breathes. It is the light of God which is everlasting, and will bring glory to all that it visits. Wisdom will bless any person upon which it rests. They that serve with wisdom shall minister to the Holy One; and them that love it shall have the Lord's blessing.

Here Endeth the Epistle.

The Gospel for Septuagesima is from the writings of occult author Alexander Cannon

You who are wise in your superior discernments, wrought from physical wisdom should perceive that there are gifts and powers not known to the world of ordinary mortals. The Majority of Churches know nothing of this truth of things. This is because these great ecclesiastical systems are not the world's saviours they profess to be. The world will be saved by a goodly band of men and women who have constituted the real Church of old, and who have found it anew in the hearts of the races when the purging time has ended. Take no thought where you shall be or what you shall do to render yourselves immune to the tempest as it rises. Those who have the sign of wisdom on their foreheads have no cause to fear that which impends.

Praise Be to Thee O Christ.
