The Collect.

O God of Gods, we ask you to give us order to our being, thoughts, feelings and actions, granting us grace and power to know you as promised to us by The Christed One. Amen.

The Epistle for the 2nd Sunday after Easter is from the Gnosis of the Invisible God.

These mysteries that I give you, guard them well. Give them to none unless worthy of them, not father, mother, sister, brother or any other relative. These mysteries must not be traded for any goods of this world. Do not speak of these mysteries to anyone except those who are worthy of them. Only those who have left behind the physical world and all its affairs, and are in faith in truth and light, and treat each other as true children of the light shall be taught the mysteries.

Here Endeth the Epistle.

The Gospel for the 2nd Sunday after Easter is from the words of the Eckanker Master Paul Twitchell.

It is possible for anyone to change the trend of their life, not by hearing or reading truth, but by making an active part of their consciousness in daily experience, until it becomes a habit every moment of the day, instead of just an occasional thought. Let God operate in the consciousness morning, noon and night, until gradually the awareness comes. Then we have made the transition from hearers of the word to doers of the word. As doers of the word we find the divine grace filtering through our souls, and we shall share in God's bountiful harvest of wonders.

Praise Be to Thee O Christ.
